

HUM 340 : Principles & Techniques of Research

A working knowledge of the principles and techniques of research in the Humanities is essential for advanced learning and for careers in which information gathering and evaluation and their application to decision making are critical skills. Topics covered include: types of sources, research tools, documentation styles, evaluation of sources, development of critical thinking and communication skills, integrity of research, audience analysis, collaborative research, and presentation of research.

Credits 3